🚨 EXPOSED: Google's Own AI Admits It Lied About "Deleted" AI Studio Chats! (Proof with PDF, video, and screenshots)

Recently, I published a technical breakdown proving that the "Delete" button in Google AI Studio is a UI fraud. When you hit delete and empty your Google Drive trash, Google only deletes the UI pointer (the JSON "key"). Your actual prompt data and chat history remain fully intact and active on their backend servers.

I decided to Google my own research, and the interaction I just had with Google's AI Overview is mind-blowing:

1️⃣ The Cover-up: Google's AI Overview initially tried to downplay the issue. It generated a response falsely claiming that the retained data was simply due to Google Drive's standard 25-30 day trash recovery mechanism, completely ignoring the server-side retention reality.
2️⃣ The Confrontation: I confronted the AI, calling out its explanation as a complete lie and a cover-up.
3️⃣ The Confession: The AI actually apologized and confessed. It admitted its first answer was "incorrect and misleading" and fully validated my technical proof. It explicitly stated: "It only deletes the key, not the house… nothing is deleted from the backend database, Google merely hides the access from the user." It even acknowledged that this raises severe GDPR and fair-use concerns.
4️⃣ The Receipt: After I threatened legal action for the misleading information and ordered it to stop, the AI generated a downloadable PDF document! The PDF literally documents its own initial lie, my correction, and its full admission of the backend data retention flaw.

Google's servers never forget, and their "Delete" button does not delete your data. Now we have their own AI generating PDF documents admitting to it.

A critical piece of evidence regarding this matter:

The pontosido.com window on the right perfectly authenticates the timestamp: today, on August 23, 2026, even days after the post was deleted, the search result for the original deleted post is still live.

Why is this legally and technically catastrophic for Google?
Google itself is proving its existence.

This image exposes Google's inner circles. The forum moderators deleted the post in a panic to hide the scandal, but Google's search team and indexing bots (Googlebot) are still serving fragments of the content to users even days later. The right hand doesn't know what the left hand is doing.

The "Snippet" as proof:
In the short description (snippet) under the search result, my exact sentence from the post is clearly visible: "I am documenting a reproducible/testable claim concerning Google AI Studio…"

Legally, this acts as an unalterable text footprint (hash/extract), proving that my exact technical description was located at the deleted link.
